History

Originally a French village, the city of Detroit was founded by Antoine Lornet de La Mothe Cadillac under the orders of Louis XIV in 1701.

The city's name was derived from the French phrase "Ville d'Etroit," meaning "city of the strait," as the village was established along the banks of the Detroit River. In its early years, Detroit was a Canadian city under French and British rule. General Anthony Wayne and his American troops occupied the Detroit area in 1796. General Wayne's victories against the Indians helped the United States of America gain sovereignty of the area at the turn of the 18th century. Wayne County was established in his honor, and many Americans settled there.

Three years after Detroit became a town in 1802, it was destroyed by fire. Over the course of the next decade, Judge Augustus Woodward and Governor William Hull worked to establish the territory of Michigan, rebuilding the city to act as the capital of the new territory. Detroit was incorporated as a city in 1815, and remained the capital until 1837 when Michigan gained its statehood.

Throughout the 1800s, Detroit was a major manufacturing center for transportation equipment such as railroad cars, engines, locomotives, and carriages. In 1896, the first car was built in Detroit by Henry Ford-the year 1900 marked the beginning of the automobile era, and Detroit earned its nickname "The Motor City." Three major American automobile manufacturers, Ford, General Motors Corp., and Chrysler Corp. (which was acquired by Germany's Daimler-Benz in 1998), all got their start in the Detroit area. The automobile industry drew large numbers of people to Detroit in the early 20th Century, and transportation equipment manufacturing continues to play a vital role in the city's economy today.

Attractions

The downtown skyline of Detroit is dominated by the Renaissance Center, which has six office towers and the 73-story Westin Hotel, one of the tallest hotels in the world. Located in southeast downtown is Greektown, one of the "Motor City's" most popular entertainment districts. At the center of Greektown lies Trapper's Alley, the former fur center of the Midwest that has been transformed into a shopping center comprising numerous 500 year-old buildings enclosed under one roof. Belle Isle Park, located in the Detroit River three miles southeast of the city center, is the nation's oldest and largest city island park. The park features an outdoor zoo that is open during the spring and summer months, as well as the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory, known for its orchid collections, and an aquarium that are open year-round. Detroit's history as the "Automotive Capital of the World" can be seen in the area's many historical attractions, including the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, located in Dearborn. The Village is an indoor-outdoor museum that preserves 80 famous historic structures, among them Thomas Edison's laboratory, the bikeshop where the Wright Brothers' first airplane was built, and the farm where Henry Ford was born. Nearby Ann Arbor is the home of the University of Michigan, which has the largest college-owned football stadium in the United States. Bentley Historical Library on the University's North Campus contains the Michigan Historical Collections and the University of Michigan archives. Popular tourist destinations in Ann Arbor include Kerrytown, the city's historic market district and nearby Ann Arbor Artisan Market, which features hand-made arts and crafts on Sunday afternoons from April through December; as well as downtown's Main Street Area, the shopping, restaurant, and theater district of Ann Arbor.
